Like a silent sentinel staring out across the water, Harbor stands. Warily she studies the shore—a shore that has hosted over a century of classes. Displaying ancient remnants from classes long gone, her hallways still echo with the sound of students.

But with the start of a new millennium, Harbor's golden era died. The sun set over the lake, causing darkness to fall over her brick walls.

Her vigilance will be everlasting, and her presence will forever be felt. Nonetheless, Harbor's reign ended with a school bell—resounding and resonant, but punctual and indifferent—on the fifth of June, 2001.

This last yearbook is dedicated to you, Harbor. The last ship has come to port.

From Beginning to End

November 3, 2000 – a day that would not be forgotten soon by current Mariners nor Harbor High alumni

At a 10:00 am press conference, Ashtabula Area City Schools superintendent Dr. William Licate announced his decision to consolidate Harbor High School and its cross-town rival, Ashtabula High. As he did so, he simultaneously brought the end of one era and the beginning of another. The era of Harbor's glory would soon end—only one year remained in which to enjoy it.

Students greeted this transition with mixed reactions. Most were shocked; some were excited; a few were livid. But gradually, students came to accept that this would be the last class ever to graduate from Harbor's hallowed halls.

Eyes soon turned toward the future. Student committees comprised of students in grades 9-11 from both Ashtabula and Harbor soon met to decide upon critical factors in the consolidation such as the name, colors, and mascot of the new combined school. A vote of the underclassmen from both schools decided that the new school would be Lakeside High, with green and gold for the colors and a dragon for the mascot.

Organizations from the two schools began unofficially teaming up for certain community events. The bands combined for parades and concerts; after the last Harbor-Ashtabula basketball game, a dance was held with students from both schools. Little by little, students from both schools began to accept the idea of sharing a building with students who had once been their bitter rivals.

So began the "Farewell Tour" of Mariners. As the Class of 2001 said farewell to the building that had harbored them for four years, so would the remaining classes be saying it, as well: farewell to Mariner spirit, farewell to tradition, and farewell to the royal purple and gold that had been associated with Harbor High School for as long as anyone could recall. As the year progressed, Harbor students made it clear that they would not go quietly into the night; instead, they worked as hard as they could to ensure that Harbor's last year would be its most memorable.

"Her fame will never die"

If the Class of 2001 went back in time about 108 years, they would be graduating with the first class of Harbor High School. Though Harbor High wasn't built until 1911, students went to the "Harbor Special School." The seven graduates in 1893 were guaranteed a place in Harbor High School history.

Dr. William E. Wenner was hired Superintendent of Harbor Special Schools in 1909, a position he retained until his death in 1946. He served several terms in the state legislature and state senate.

The Jackson Building was completed in 1891. It stood where the "B" Building presently stands. In 1910, Harbor citizens realized a new school was necessary. They voted to issue bonds for $100,000 to build a three-story brick building of 22 rooms, fully equipped with auditorium, a large gymnasium, and a fine physics and chemistry lab.

At the dedication of the new high school, a speaker stated, "We have a beautiful, modern school home. Let us not forget our fathers, mothers and friends, whose earnest solicitude, self-sacrifice, and unremitting toil have made possible this building." The dedication was on Friday, October 11, 1912. It began at 9:30 AM and ended with a tour of the school at 7:00 PM.

Although Harbor High School's history has come to an end, "her fame will never die."

Homecoming 2000

Whether it was dancing all night, pigging out at dinner, or laughing it up with friends at the game, Homecoming 2000 was certainly an event to remember. The band kicked off the celebration with a highly spirited parade from Harbor to Wenner Field. The Homecoming court was escorted to the field riding atop snazzy convertibles.

Although the team lost the game, an exciting battle against Ashtabula, nothing could steal the spirit of celebration. The fans remained positive and supportive for the duration of the game and festivities.

Adam McKinney and Sarah Bodnar were announced as Harbor's 2000 Homecoming King and Queen. Sarah was crowned by football captains Billy Jenne and Nathan Tackett.

The Senior Women decorated Andrus Party Center. Sarah Koski noted, "Decorating was hard because of the limited number of helpers, but it turned out great and we had fun."

The hard work definitely paid off, as a good time was had by all. "Everyone seemed to have a great time. I had a lot of fun with all of my friends," remarked Brian Chapman, a senior new to Harbor.

Whether it was dinner beforehand, boogying down on the dance floor, or the after-dance revelry, everyone had some good memory of the final Harbor Homecoming.

Whodunit?

Where were you on the night of January 8th? Harbor's Thespian Club can answer that scandalous question. The mystery dinner theater production All My Murders was presented at the Elks Club that night, where a seemingly normal soap opera taping went horribly wrong.

A story within a story, the cast assembled for a taping of The Day After Tomorrow. When the lights came up after a blackout, Baxter Phillips' (Phillip Werman) fictional death was replaced by the murder of Madison Dupree (Crystal Crytzer).

Who could have done it? The audience had many suspects to choose from. Delaney (Karina Arutyunova) seemed too sweet. Cherie (Therese Scharf) was always willing to play with a gun. Or maybe the keyboard player (Sarah Goudge) who barely ever spoke. Marla (LeeAnn Ocilka) was the obvious choice because of her intense hate for Madison, but was she capable of murder? What about Holly (Jeannie Jyurovat), who played an innocent nun?

The cast kept the audience on its toes until the killer was revealed in the final scene. Advisor Kathleen Milford and student director Justin Nigro helped to make All My Murders a success for the actors and a great time for everyone.

Harbor Holidays

The creative costumes of Halloween and the decorative dressings of Christmas add an air of festivity to any environment. Harbor was no exception as these holidays brought out the spirit of fun and caring in students.

A sea of bright, beautiful colors splashed through the halls as students sported costumes from the cute to the outlandish for Halloween.

Classrooms and hallways came alive with festive decorations when the Christmas spirit swept up students. Senior men donated a tree and classroom doors were wrapped in festive paper. But the Mariners' celebration wasn't merely superficial. Students donated over 1,000 food items for the annual JOGS-sponsored food drive for needy families.

Harbor Helpers

What is high school all about, anyway? For most students, it's about sports, activities, friends, and fun. But for some students at Harbor, it's also about lending a helping hand to those less fortunate.

In December, Spanish Club members packed advisor Mrs. Joyce Hignite's van with groceries, clothing, and toys for the families they "adopted" for the holidays.

Peer Volunteers, a new group introduced at Harbor this year, also helped by putting up drywall for Habitat for Humanity, a program that builds houses for those less fortunate. John Scharf, who founded the organization along with junior Karina Arutyunova, commented, "Peer Volunteers is about supply and demand. I hope it will exist and thrive long after its co-founders are forgotten."

None of Harbor's students "gave of themselves" quite like participants in the American Red Cross Bloodmobile held in October and February. Students over 17 were eligible to donate a pint of their own blood to people in need. "We were disappointed that we fell short of our goals, but the blood we were able to collect will save four lives per pint," said Kristin Hapach, coordinator. Students also volunteered at the blood drive as greeters, escorts, and canteen workers.

Though her van is already filled with gifts, Spanish teacher Joyce Hignite heads back inside the school to retrieve even more.

Sailor Spirit

Harbor spirit was apparent by the amount of participation in spirit weeks, club tournaments, and pep assemblies. Students dressed up as twins, professionals, and even super heroes.

"I save the world one roll at a time," commented Duct Tape Man, aka Jack Bartone. Mismatched clothes, crazy hats, and pajamas were all worn during spirit weeks.

"It was funny to see everyone all dressed up," noted senior Christina Painter. But dressing up for spirit week wasn't the only way students displayed their Mariner Pride. Many used their powerful voices at pep assemblies.

With this being Harbor's last year, students were definitely filled with Sailor Spirit.

Harbor blankets come to good use at pep assemblies. Michelle Long, Amber Painter, Carrie Scardino, and Jennifer Benson sport their Harbor pride at the annual Business Club Volleyball Tournament.

Throwing their hands in the air with glee, freshmen Marie Bowler, Emily Peterson, Bethany Sims and Amy Giannell cheer on Mrs. Janice Wiley as she takes her bows after the faculty trounced the French Club in the annual volleyball tournament.

Patiently awaiting their turn Micheline Guerriero, Ari Sargent and others on the Spanish Club's team sit and watch the tournaments.

Gettin' Together

"I believe it is time to take a bold step and provide more opportunities for our high school students. I believe it is time to give our children a better chance to be successful in the new millennium. I believe it is time to consolidate the existing high schools into one strong program. We cannot become what we need to be by remaining what we are."

With those words, Superintendent William J. Licata laid the groundwork for a combined high school. The freshmen were to be in the 221 Lake Avenue building, while the upperclassmen were to attend classes on 44th Street. When Dr. Licata made this announcement, many students expressed anger and wept openly in Harbor's halls.

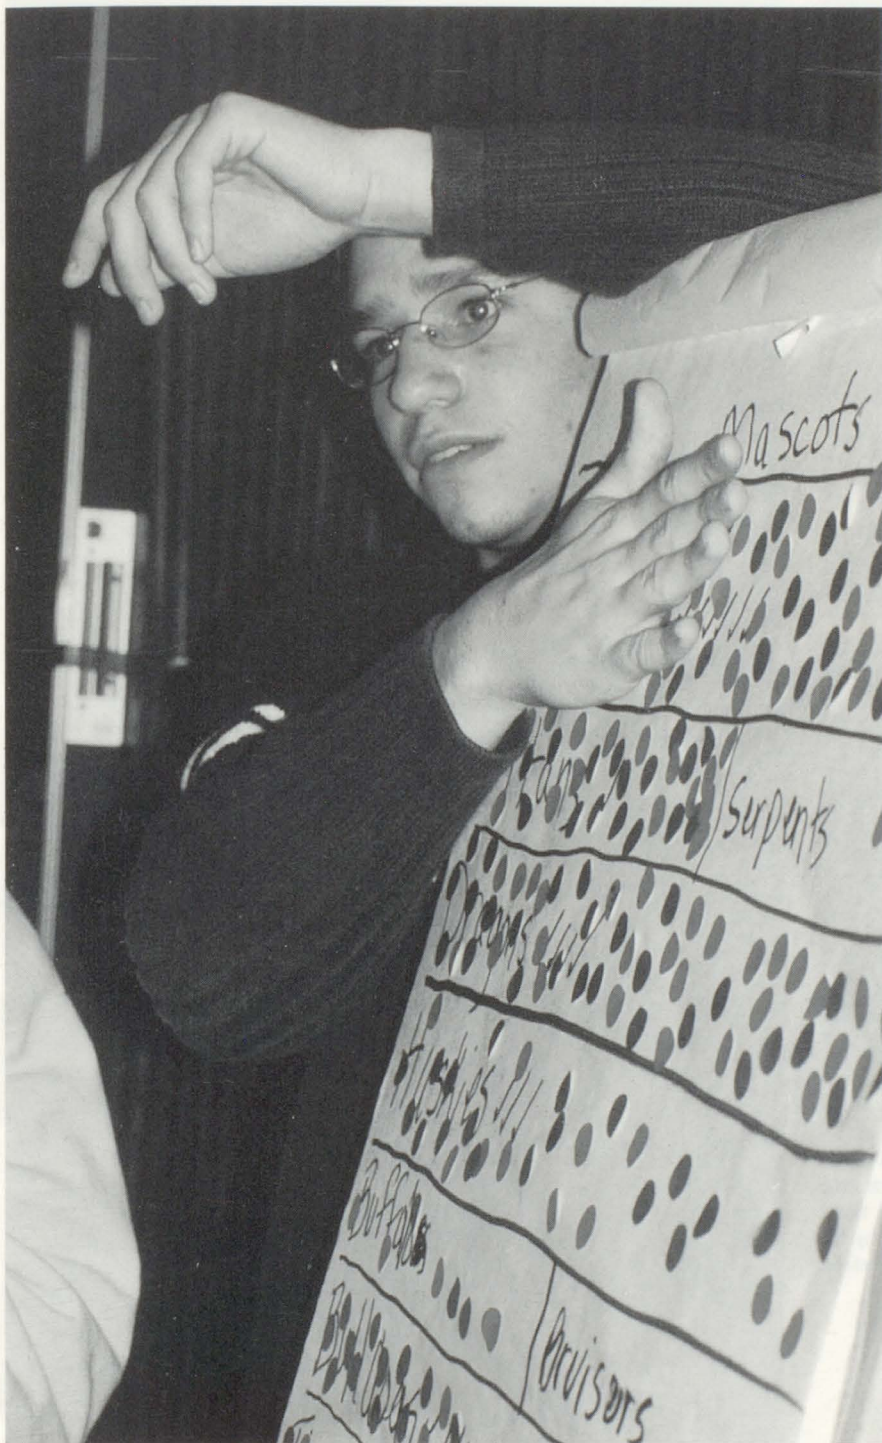

After the consolidation was announced, selected students from Harbor, Ashtabula, Columbus, and West met at Kent State University Ashtabula Campus for two days to make decisions on the new school name, mascot and colors. Planned activities helped students get to know each other by comparing similarities. At the end of the meeting, future Lakeside High School Dragons emerged, with their colors of hunter green and Vegas gold.

The cost of consolidation caused some concern. Uniforms and the repair and painting of buildings would be expensive. Ads placed in the Star Beacon got the community's attention. Phil's Catering donated rigatoni dinners after basketball games at both Ashtabula and Harbor High Schools. Mr. Paul Yocum, Officer Jim Mackey, and Mr. Chuck Heusinger drew a crowd at Celebrity Waiter's Night at Garfield's Restaurant.

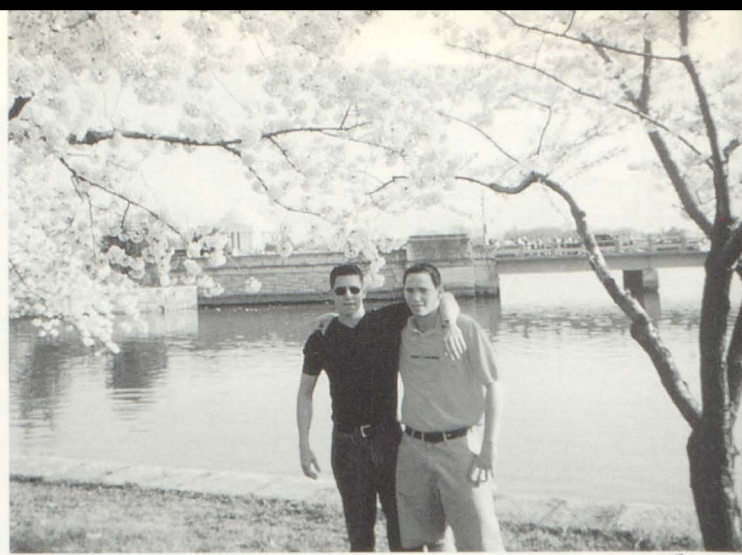

After a while, the thought of consolidation brought excitement to students' faces. Junior Kim Rihn looked forward when she said, "I hope that the consolidation will be a successful learning experience for all those involved." • Phillip Werman

Out and About in 'Bula

Harbor students had a way of getting out in the community! Several gave their talents to both avocations and occupations. Area businesses such as Lakeway Restaurant, Sears, Chi-Chi's and DIY employed Mariners looking for extra money. Junior Mark Wagner, an employee of DIY, noted, "I like my job because I learn a lot and become familiar with different home improvements." Some students incorporated their talents or interests into their jobs. Senior Charles Kachersky built computers for his clients, freshman Aimee Lambert free-lanced for the Star Beacon, and junior Rachel Sass taught dance at the Ashtabula Arts Center.

The importance of community service was evident in the newly-formed Peer Volunteers, a student club involved in projects like Habitat for Humanity and Big Brothers/Big Sisters. JOGS students gave time to organizations such as Happy Hearts and Homesafe. Seniors Darcy Pizzi and Jaelyn Colucci volunteered for Ohio Reads, while juniors Laura Koski and Erica Pendleton worked with children for the After School Discovery Program.

As always, Harbor students still had a social life. The efforts of junior Mike Peet took him to Hawaii, where he competed in a golf tournament. Several students, such as Ryan Cusman, Adam Kobrinski and Matt Umholtz, played baseball in the community. Some also got a little musical. Attic Dreams was a popular local band comprised of three Harbor students—junior Jesse Eastman, senior Mike Johnson, and sophomore Dan Eastman (as well as Ashtabula senior Matt Lopez). Sophomore David DeWitt acted and directed for Reserve Actors of Ashtabula. Community organizations also employed the help of students: junior Kim Rihn served on the Board of Trustees for the College Access program and several Harbor juniors participated in Youth Leadership.

Mariner Madness

From hula-hoops to potato sack racing to tug-o-war contests, Harbor students went crazy at the final class tournaments. Basketball was the hot contest to win, but that didn't stop students from participating in other sports activities. "I had a lot of fun playing basketball; it was really funny because we were so pitiful, but we all had a lot of fun doing it. I really hope that we can start a new tradition similar to this one at Lakeside in the 2001-2002 school year," commented junior Jen Benton.

Since it was the last tournament, students put extra effort into the decorations. Some stayed after school the night before to adorn the bleachers and walls in the style of their themes, which included Hobo Haven, Viva Las Vegas, Sophomores in a Tub, and A Day at the Beach. "I really enjoyed helping decorate the gym with my friends," remarked sophomore Gina Schwartz.

From anchors to purple and gold to the Harbor Hymn, countless traditions at Harbor High School were laid to rest this year, but none as wacky and wild as Harbor's class tournaments.

Led by senior Jen Williams, the Harbor Madrigals perform the Harbor Hymn for one of the final times.

Farewell Tour

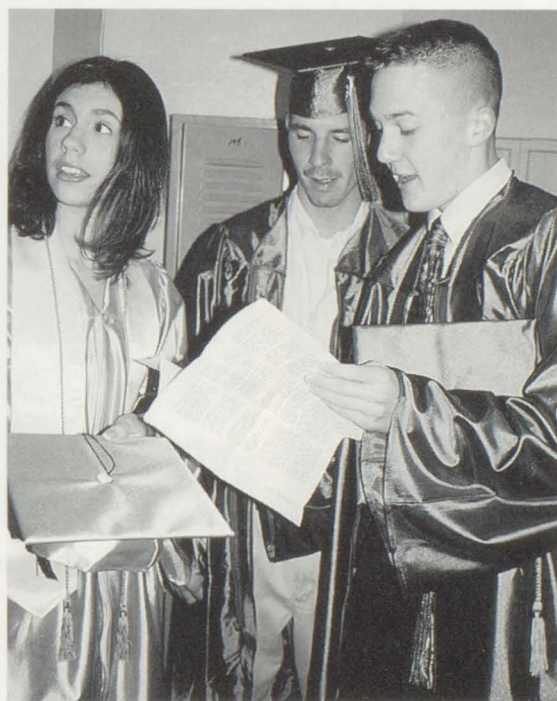

It's the last stop on the farewell tour: graduation. On May 31st, 2001, Harbor's latest—and last—batch of alumni left the building.

After speeches from class president Stephanie Braat, valedictorian Stacy Mermis, and selected speaker Mrs. Encie Moroski, the seniors filed onto the stage to receive their diplomas. Unlike previous years, the seniors' favorite teachers, rather than school board members, handed out diplomas.

"It's sad to see Harbor come to an end, but I was happy to be a part of the last graduating class," commented senior Allison Roskovics.

• Justin Nigro

As Josh Lillis and Adam McKinney check out their senior wills, Kristina Tulino dreams about a bright future awaiting her after graduating sixth in her class.

In a matter of minutes, Harbor's newest alumni go from reserved, disciplined satisfaction to wild, joyous celebration as they are pronounced graduates.

Fixing the tassel on his cap, Rebecca Marsch helps out soon-to-be graduate Josh Ball.

Grand Finale

After 13 years of tests, teachers and homework, the year that everyone had anticipated, finally arrived. Harbor's 108th graduating class would be forever immortalized as the very last class to graduate from "dear old Harbor High." Hours upon hours of hard work went into getting them where they were – on their "Farewell Tour" as the last class to receive a diploma from Harbor High School.

The pressure was more intense than usual for the Class of 2001. This would be the last homecoming, the last class tournaments, the last prom, the last graduation ceremony. They would have to make these events as memorable as possible in order to leave an indelible impression on Harbor history and end the era with a bang.

The worries of placement tests and college played a large part in the lives of seniors. Senior privileges offered a reprieve. Most seniors took advantage of their 7th period study hall perk and left at 1:12 every afternoon, giving them 48 extra minutes a day to go to work or, in some cases, pursue their outside interests, whatever they might have been. "It gives me extra time to sleep," yawned Terry Ginn.

Seniors also inherited the privilege of parking in the parking lot as well, which eliminated the long treks from West 3rd Street, Walnut Boulevard and Lake Avenue to the building every morning. While the Class of 2002 funded, organized, and decorated for the junior/senior prom, their elders sat back and relaxed.

So as high school came to an end for the Class of 2001, so did over a century of the tradition of purple and gold and the school that has been known as Harbor High since 1911.

With the right people involved, even decorating school for Christmas can get kind of wild. Wild things Sarah Koski and Jaclyn Colucci spruce up the cafeteria for the holidays.

Must...stay...strong!" Brian Tidd and Matt Hanselman struggle to keep Arie Wolfert on top of the human pyramid at band camp in August.

I'm too sexy for my shirt." Party animal Mike DeWitt strips down to his vest at homecoming.

Class of 2002 - Setting their sights

Prom being a top priority, juniors got busy fund-raising right at the starting line. Zap a Snack pizza sales brought in some big bucks, and with more than half the year left to prepare for prom, the juniors were well on their way. "This year has been more stressful than last year. We know now that we're all really pushing for results—a great prom," said class president Liz Driscoll.

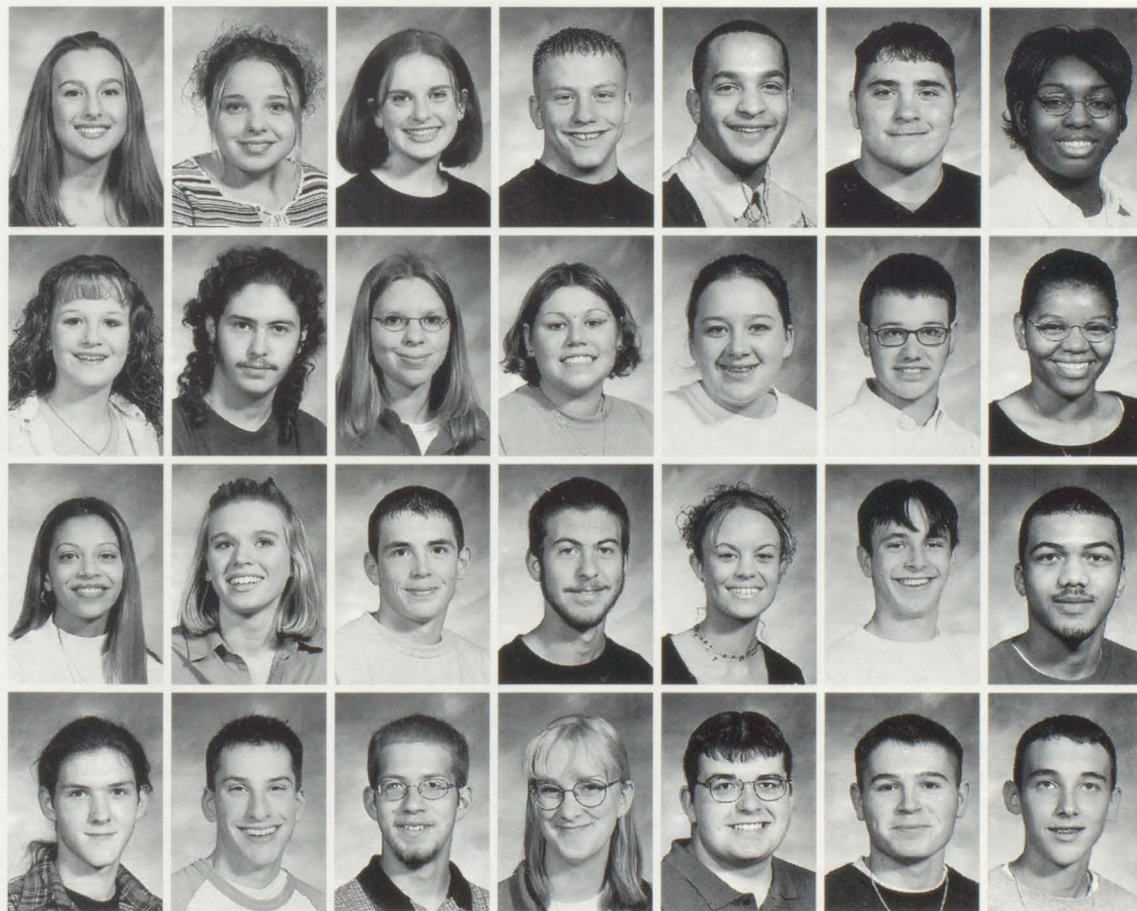

Determined to choose their colleges early, juniors prepared to take SAT's and ACT's for college entry applications. The PSAT's gave many juniors a reality check in what the SAT is all about. A project in English classes also entered the process. "I think the thing that helped me out in deciding my career was Mrs. Moroski's research paper. I found out there was a lot more to my career than I thought," Holly Korovich said.

In an effort to make their senior year easier, the juniors started doing some community service. Habitat for Humanity was a big project involving many juniors. "I was impressed with the reaction. Everyone came out to help and worked hard," said co-founder of Peer Volunteers John Scharf.

While much was accomplished, the junior class still found time to explore the entertaining aspects of school. Tim Catron said he still had fun this year: "I liked coming to school to be with my friends and learning cool, interesting stuff in Mr. Josson's science class."

Class Of 2003 - Movin' on up

Former Freshmen! The humiliation was over. No longer being pushed around by upperclassman sophomores could finally start to enjoy their high school years. Seth Sperber said it best: "Finally being able to pick on the freshman is really cool. It's very rewarding to be the ones doing the laughing, instead of the ones being laughed at. It's fun making fun of the little people."

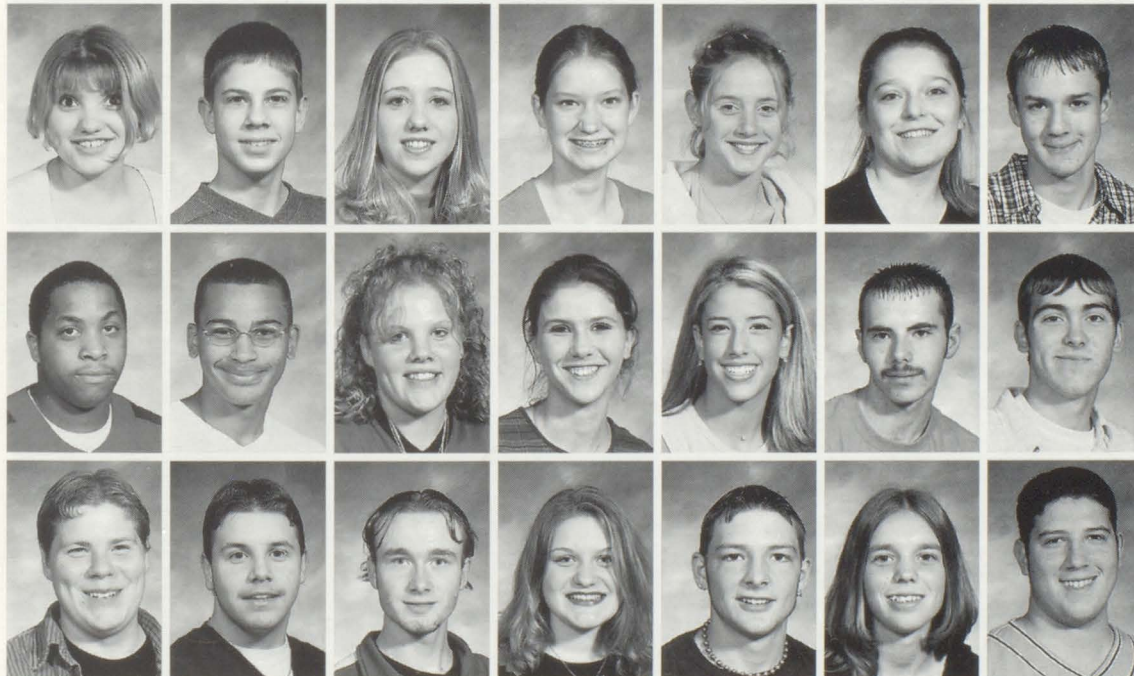

Cassandra Ennis had a different outlook: "I'm going to miss some of the teachers and the atmosphere of Harbor." She also remarked that "...it's going to be really weird going to a different school, and I'm upset because my brother and my friends graduated from Harbor, but I'm not."

Looking to their futures, the sophomores took the ASVAB tests in November and December. They followed that up with the yearly class trip to the Ashtabula County Joint Vocational School in February. When asked how she felt about being a sophomore, Becca Marsch claimed to have a good year but did log a complaint about the ASVAB tests that "...were really long—in my opinion."

Class of 2004 - More than a beginning

The first days of the year were hectic as the final freshman class of Harbor High School was initiated into the building. Before long, however, the freshman found their way around the school and also found their place in various activities. Students participated in several sports and clubs that had never been available in junior high.

Adding to the stress of adjusting to high school, freshman took the required ninth grade proficiency tests this fall. Many students passed all the sections of the test.

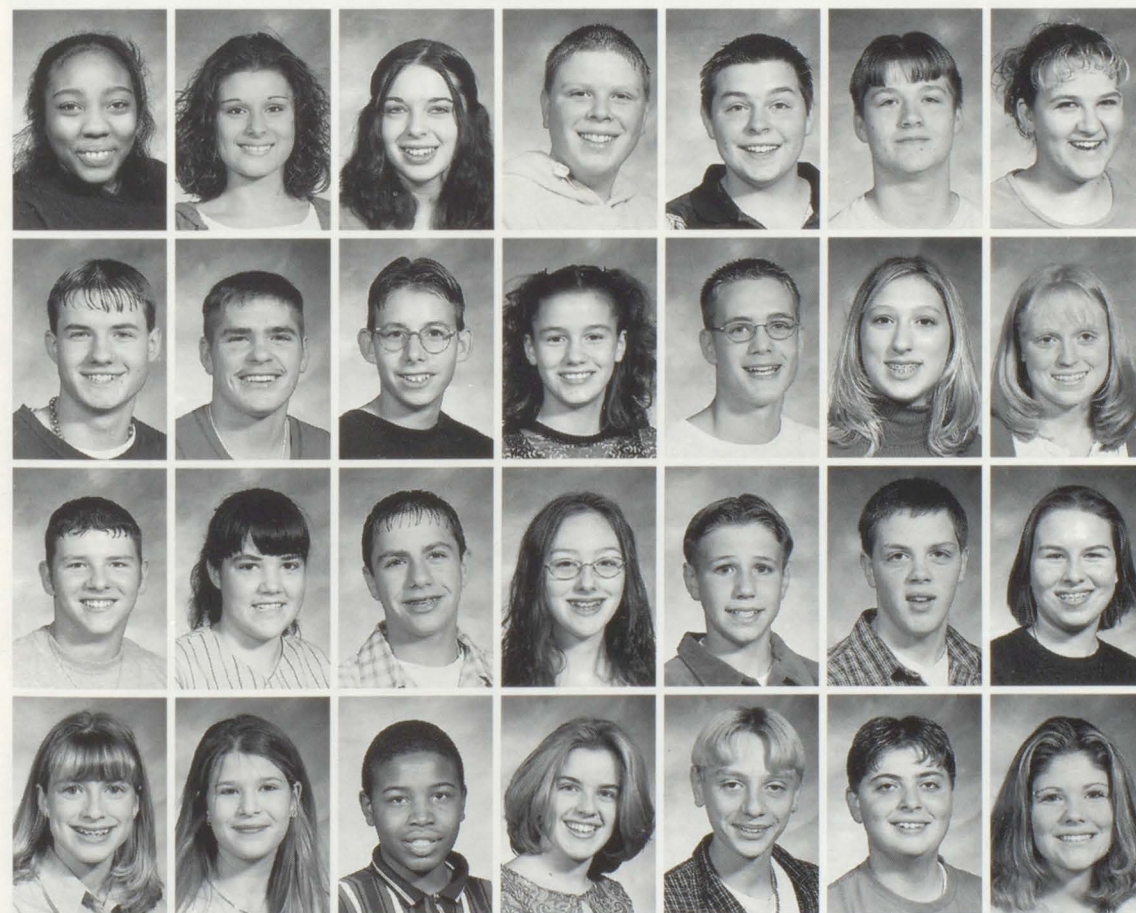

The Class of 2004 also came out to show their spirit at many pep assemblies and the annual "Beat Bula" parade. Freshman sports teams played in volleyball and boys basketball.

Freshman were involved in several successful activities. Their talents were added to Model U.N., which received first place at the Jefferson conference; choir, which received superior ratings at solo/ensemble contest; and Thespians, which put on a nearly sold-out production of All My Murders in January.

The freshman class commanded a strong presence in the building and found their place among the upper-classmen. They would continue to make themselves known the next year as the first sophomore class of Lakeside High School.

Breaking New Ground

Where can you find students improving their culinary skills, mastering the art of auto body repair, and creating works of metal and wood? The Ashtabula County Joint Vocational School was home to 37 Mariners, all well on their way to pursuing their chosen careers.

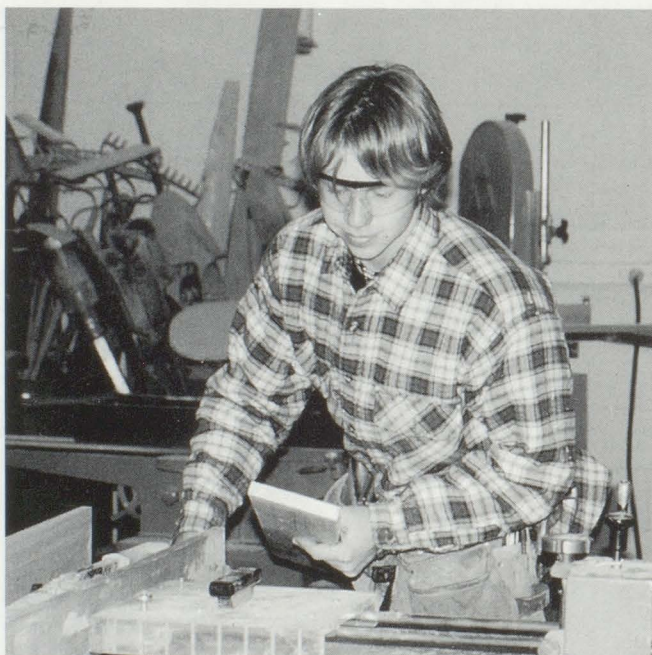

Students participated in Culinary Arts, Auto Body, Carpentry, Marketing and more programs, all designed to jump start their careers. Many programs, such as Diversified Health Occupations, had a cooperative work-study program in which seniors were able to attend only a half day of regular classes and then go to work for the rest of the day.

For first-year students at the Vo-Ed, it was quite different from a normal junior year. Standard 11th grade classes were supplemented by about three hours of course-related instruction per day. During these hours students were introduced to their chosen field and taught what exactly they were getting themselves into.

Alex Dioneff learned the fine points of auto body work and, after practicing his skills on parts provided by the school, began repairs on his own car's fenders and hood. Asked if he'd be selling it, Alex replied, "No way! It's a '72 Cutlass—a classic!"

FACULTY LEADING THE WAY

Faculty- Piloting the helm

A long era came to a close with the system's plan to consolidate, and the faculty of Harbor High School felt the strain. Many of the teachers had taught at Harbor for a large portion of their careers and were forced to make changes. "I can't believe it," said 22-year veteran Mrs. Vranek. "It's the last time we're all together. We work as a team now, and I've made a lot of good friends. I'll miss this." Several long-time staff members will be going to Lakeside Senior High the next school year.

However, the year began with many positive changes. Six new teachers joined Harbor: Miss Wiley and Mr. Leonelli, social studies; Mrs. Seifert, science; Mrs. Capetina, math; Mrs. Flautt, special education; and Mr. Rich, health and physical education. Mr. Rich also became athletic director after the retirement of Mr. Pavolino. A new administrative position was created when Mr. Anservitz became dean of students. In addition, Mrs. Burgard came on board as a tutor. Mr. Leonelli reflected on his first year at Harbor, "I enjoyed it, and I wish I could have been here longer to experience the history."

The staff cherished social gatherings, knowing it would be their last year all together—a Christmas party, monthly snacks at meetings arranged by Mrs. Edison, Weinie Wonderland with Mr. McCunn's woodshop, the celebration of Mrs. Swogger's retirement, and a special farewell party at the year's end.

Ah, brave new world! Video technology allows the freshmen squad to enjoy a newly recorded floor cheer with Advisor Janice Wiley. Though the event was their last game on home turf, the cheerleaders were in high spirits, as always.

Kicking high, the varsity squad does a chant to cheer on the crowd at an away football game.

Waiting nervously to watch the varsity squad perform in the mall cheerleading competition, Chelsea Nappi, Stephanie Sturgeon, Tara Simrak's little sis, Sheree, and Ashley Gierman make signs to cheer them on.

Varsity cheerleaders Karina Arutyunova, Stephanie Braat, Lacey Landis and Megan Wagner stomp and clap while making a tunnel for the basketball players to run through.

Js that Bula's homecoming queen? No, it's Justin Yost showing off his sexy legs and beauty queen looks as Megan Wagner escorts him around the gym.

Unforgettable

"Cheer Crazy" was the theme for the last squads of Mariner cheerleaders. After attending camp at Ohio State University, they were ready to show their spirit and "drop it like it's hot!" New dances and cheers kept the crowds' enthusiasm roaring.

"Being able to cheer with my senior friends for their last year is going to be a special memory," remarked junior Katie Mullen. Marjorie Toivola stepped in as advisor for the girls, with the help of captains Stephanie Braat and Megan Wagner. The girls spent countless hours making scrapbooks, improving cheers and organizing pep assemblies.

But this was not even half the joy of cheering. An unusually large squad of twelve energetic girls projected the sounds of spirit a mile away. "They were our biggest fans," commented junior football player Greg Seufer. "They were loud enough for us to hear them out on the field."

The girls became really good friends while dancing around, bonding at camp, cheering crazy and eating their "fried ham." "I'll never forget this year. It was crazy, but in the end everyone had fun," said senior Allison Roskovics. "The year was truly unforgettable."

Endurance.....

In the world of high school sports, upper-classmen are usually idolized in the eyes of fans and coaches.

However, that all changed this year as a flood of freshmen raced into the spotlight and dominated Harbor's final cross-country team.

Their record may not have been winning, but what's in black and white can't describe the accomplishments of this year's team. The only two girls on the team proved their dedication to the sport by sticking out the whole season while making significant improvements to their own times.

"We had an excellent influx of freshman runners," said Coach Warren Dillaway. "True, we were a bit inexperienced, but we had great leadership from Robert Elliott and Chris DeCamillo."

Attitude

"What they lacked in ability, they made up for in attitude and effort," said Coach J.C. Montanaro. They may not have had a winning record, but if there were a record for perseverance, then the record for the last girls' tennis team at Harbor would have been 11-0. Throughout the difficult season, they tried their best and never gave up.

The bright spot of the season was undoubtedly sophomore Abby Cusman's amazing successes. Tennis enthusiasts could not keep their eyes off Cusman as she finished with a 7-4 record and went all the way to the district tournament. Although she suffered a disappointing loss in the first round, nothing could steal her remarkable season.

The best game, according to junior third singles player Carrie Lee Rich, was the Edgewood game in which Alana Hapach netted an unexpected third singles victory. "I was really proud of her because she hadn't won before," said Rich. "She tried really hard."

Although they did not have a winning record, the most important thing about the season was the experience gained. Second singles player Brandy Calaway commented, "Although we had an inexperienced team, we all learned a lot and look forward to next season."

High-flying Jennifer Takach leaps for the ball with determination as her teammates look on.

Determination...

Determined to learn.
Determined to have fun.

Determined to win.

Determination plays a large role in any sport, but the 2000 volleyball team were determination poster children. In a season full of difficult match-ups with the area's best teams, determination not to give up became one of the most important goals of the team.

With a less than outstanding record, improvements within the team made each game a positive learning experience. "We tried really hard," reflected junior varsity player Katie Milano. "We could have done a little better and won a few more games, but overall, we did really well as a team."

Varsity captain Heather Nappi added, "The team was great, even if the record didn't show it. All that matters is that we improved on working as a team and had fun."

Although the team fell short of their goal of a winning season, they didn't owe their losses to lack of determination and spirit. The combination of talented juniors and the impression left upon them by seniors will ensure the fulfillment of that goal in the future.

Sidelined

One word summed up the final Mariner football season: injuries. "Our whole line was gone because of injuries," commented Jarrod Kangas, an injured player himself. As a result, the team had a winless season.

All was not lost. For the most part the team was young, leaving room to grow in the following years. The underclassmen players gained a lot of experience, and no one ever stopped trying to win games. "I'm very proud that my players always gave their best," reflected Coach Mike Hassett.

The Mariners stayed competitive right up to the last game. Senior captain Nathan Tackett considered Harbor's final football game, a 7-6 loss to Pymatuning Valley, one of the most exciting games all season.

Also leading the team as senior captains were Bill Jenne, Jason Tackett and Matt Keene. Earning All County NEC distinction were Chris Bednarski, Dan Juhola, Matt Keene, Jason Tackett and Nathan Tackett.

Amazed

Who would've known that a season full of positive surprises awaited the Lady Mariners? Who would've guessed that a team short on players could perform so well? And who would've dreamed that this young team would win seven games, more than the past two seasons combined?

Amazing fans and amazing themselves, Harbor's girls' basketball team made a tough campaign look easy. JV Coach Sue Jennings echoed this sentiment. "We were very happy with the result, considering how young we were." Sophomore Nicole Jones attributed the Mariners' success to cooperation. "We played well as a team," she observed.

The team won a number of significant games. The girls wound up the Harbor-Ashtabula rivalry by sweeping both contests. At season's end, the Lady Mariners closed Fawcett Gymnasium with two wins before finishing things off with some sweet revenge over PV. This added up to three victories in a row, a feat which hadn't happened in four years.

Not everything was about winning, though. "I had a lot of fun," remarked freshman Bethany Sims.

Success

The wrestling team made their way to the top in their final year as Mariner grapplers, finishing fourth in the NEC and sending several individual members to the finals. Sophomore Chris Turner advanced the furthest, going all the way to the district finals.

The Mariners consisted of mainly first- and second-year wrestlers, but still held an 8-6 record for the season. Harbor enjoyed the largest team in the league this year and had 29 members coming back for the next year.

Reflecting on the season, head coach John Anservitz said: "I thought we had a pretty successful season considering we are so young. I'm looking forward to making some serious noise next year as the Lakeside Dragons."

Individuality

The stars shined over Wenner Field this season. Track stars that is. While the team as a whole did an outstanding job at their track meets, it was the individual members of the team that really shined. With athletes such as Heather Nappi leading the girls' team with her superior hurdling talent, it was no wonder she made headlines all year. Commenting on her last season, Nappi said, "I'm proud of our team. We came together and worked together to make our season great."

The girls team wasn't the only one with a star-studded line up. The boys team had an excellent season with victories all over the county. For the first time in nine years, the 4 x 800 relay team beat the Edgewood Warriors—a victory talked about for weeks afterward. Desire

When it came down to it, Harbor's last Lady Mariners softball team was all about girl power. Even though they had a rough start, they went out with a blaze of glory. "In the beginning, it was really rough trying to get the team pumped up, but in the end we finally came together to be the sectional champions," said freshman Ryne Miggo.

Their overall record was 6-12 and their NEC record was 3 and 11. The desire in their eyes while they played was hard to miss. The Lady Mariners played with both heart and spirit.

JV Coach Sue Jennings proudly remarked, "Even though we had a young team and it started off slow, we finished up strong." The girls' last game was a very heartfelt one. Sophomore Erika Kendall commented, "The last game was pretty emotional for me because it made me realize that this was the last time I would be playing sports for Harbor." This year proved that the ladies had the desire to win and the courage to be champions.

Almost undefeated. The most successful team of the year was the boys' baseball team. With two transfers from Ashtabula High School, the varsity team had the fewest losses in a season with an 18-2 record and broke the school record for batting average. Junior Matt Umholtz stated, "This year's team impressed me with their will to never give up."

Umholtz was named the Star Beacon's Player of the Year, and Coach Dan Craft was honored as Coach of the Year.

All other teams had a grand season as well. The freshman team ended their season with a 7-6 record, and the JV ended with a 7-8 record.

The varsity team won the NEC Championship. Varsity player Chris Bednarski remarked, "I enjoyed playing with my teammates. We practiced long and hard, and it paid off. Next year, I hope we bring another NEC Championship at Lakeside." For the All-NEC team, Ryan Cusman and Matt Umholtz were on the 1st team, and Dan Juhola, Brian Chapman, and Mike Peet were on the 2nd team.

"We won at Jefferson, and we got a gavel. It was definitely a good year for Model U.N."

•Justin Nigro

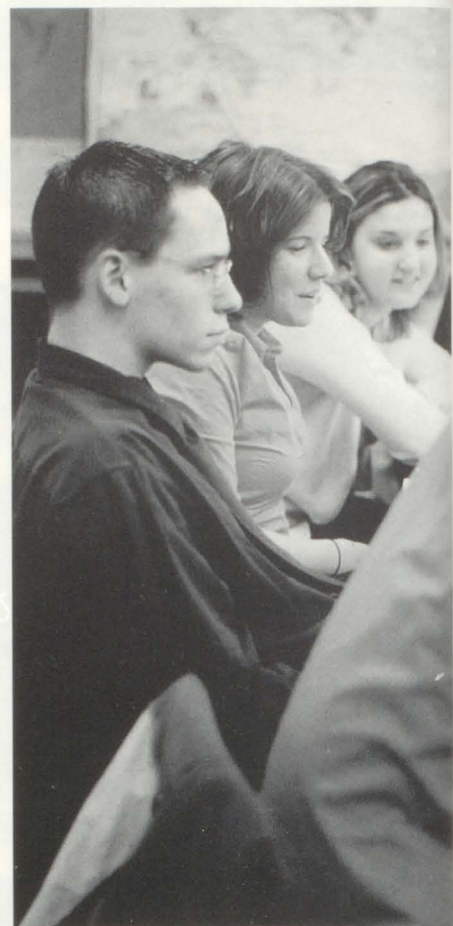

Harbor's Model U.N. team demanded that their voices be heard. In the club, members assume the roles of countries and debate issues accordingly. A pleasant surprise met the team at their first conference—they took first place at Jefferson. The team also participated in the Kent State conference and walked away with individual awards. Helping to lead the way for Model U.N. were new advisor Mr. Tony Leonelli, president Mike Publicover and vice president Justin Nigro.

Student council, advised by Mrs.

Lisa Raffa, helped out both in the school and the community. The first major responsibilities of the students were to organize homecoming, prom and class tournaments. The students also read to elementary students at Christmas time. Another job was to serve as tour guides for the incoming freshmen, showing them the charms of what will become Lakeside 9. Officers for the year were president Greg Johnson, vice president Sarah Barker, secretary Allison Roskovics and treasurer Sarah Bodnar.

Mental Mariners

"The mentorship program helped me find a career to pursue."

• Laura Snitcher

The mind is a muscle too. Proving that brains are better than brawn, Harbor's chapter of the National Honor Society, Academic Team and mentorship program all enjoyed a successful year.

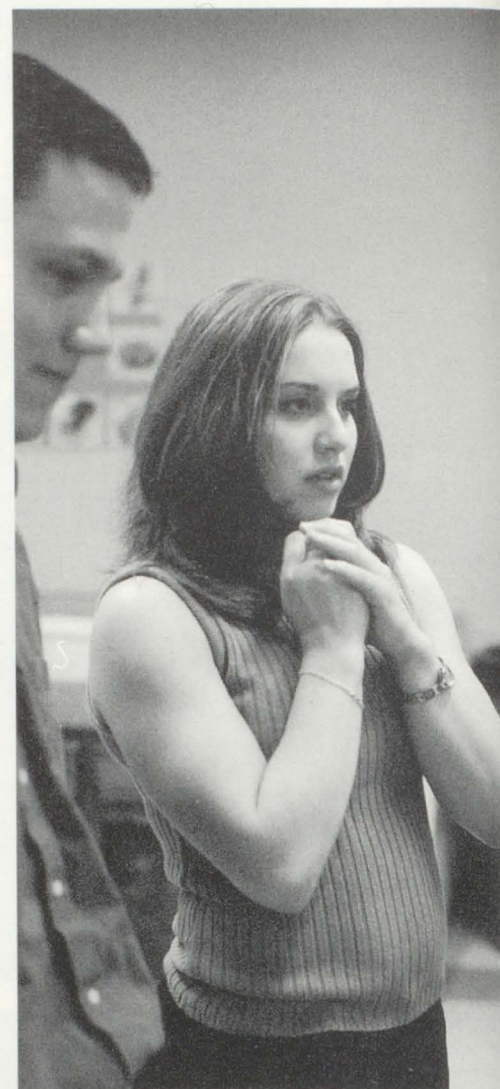

National Honor Society members kept busy all year, from October's Sweetest Day carnation sale to April's induction ceremony. In the winter, they judged science fair projects at Thurgood Marshall.

The Academic Team competed in Buzzerpalooza at Case Western Reserve as well as the Scholastic Bowl, where they took second place. The team also made an appearance on Whiz Kids, a TV show produced by WQLN. Despite its being Harbor's last year, the team started new traditions by sporting colorful shirts and facing off with the faculty in a "smarty challenge."

Mariner mentorship participants chose a wide array of jobs to shadow. Would-be aviators, news broadcasters and elementary school teachers all participated in the program, which helped students decide on a future career.

What would we do without them? Blood donors and office aides helped out a great deal throughout the year.

Not quite reaching the goal of sixty people, the Bloodmobile turnout was a little over forty. Kristin Hapach took on the big job as coordinator. She explained, "It took a lot of hard work, but it was worth it, knowing that we were able to help so many people."

Office aides assisted the school by running errands, putting mail away and answering phones. Doing all the little jobs made it easier for the secretaries to get through their hectic days.

Giving the audience a little something extra to enjoy, the dance team, majorette and flag-line entertained the audience with their amazing moves.

Football half-time shows showcased their talents and awed audiences. Basketball season took a new turn with the new dance team, created by Debbie Frye, and many fans were pleased with the results. Beth Hemminger remarked, "I went to many basketball games, and I enjoyed watching them perform at half-time."

With Michelle Santill as captain and Jen Williams as co-captain, good leadership held the team together. "I had so much fun being captain of the first team at Harbor High School—it was a great honor," Santill said.

"My last year in band was definitely the best. I'm really going to miss it next year."

•Matt Hanselman

"From the shores of Lake Erie, Harbor High School is proud to present the Mariner Magic Marching Band!" With those familiar words, the Harbor band came marching down the football field every Friday night playing a lively rendition of "Anchors Aweigh." During marching season, the band traveled to every football game and performed an impressive half-time show. The band was smaller than usual this year with 35 musicians, 3 flagline members, and 1 majorette, Darcy Pizzi.

In order to perfect their half-time performances, band members packed up their instruments and headed off to a week of band camp at Camp Frederick in Rogers, Ohio. "I have great memories from band camp. It's always a lot of fun," remarked junior clarinet player Laura Snitcher.

Marching season wasn't the only part of being in the band. When football season was over, concert band started. Along with practicing the music they played at concerts throughout the year, they also participated in OMEA band contest at Lakeview High School and planned a trip to Myrtle Beach, where they received a first place trophy at the music festival.

There was also the option of being part of jazz band. This year's jazz band consisted of 10 members. They played at different functions including the Music Boosters reverse raffle, Lakeland Jazz Fest, and Tri-C Jazz Fest.

Harbor's final Mariner band was small but sensational. From marching season to concert season, the band had a successful year.

"The best thing about choir this year was the trip to Toronto, especially The Lion King."
•Eric Kerns

Harbor High was renowned for decades of smashing theatrical performances and musical presentations. Determined to make the school's last year no exception, director Kathy Milford led her thespians, choir and madrigals through one final season of glory.

The thespians thrilled audiences on several occasions. The January production of All My Murders, an audience participation mystery dinner theatre, harvested a full cast of Mariners. Student director Justin Nigro shared theatrical anxiety with Mrs. Milford when one of the production's lead roles was recast at the eleventh hour. Jeannie Jyurovat, who came into the rehearsals just one day before the performance, described her part as "a big challenge, but I enjoyed it."

Dedicated to the memory of Mr. Oliver Kaura, a longtime band director at Harbor, the March production of The Music Man played to a filled auditorium at Kent State University's Ashtabula Campus. Jen Williams, the cast's Marian Paroo, said, "Even though I am going to miss performing with the cast, I am glad that I will still have the memories to cherish forever."

Musical performances kept the choir busy. They put on several concerts, including a preview concert in the fall and a pops concert in May with the band. They also entertained audiences at nursing homes.

The madrigals, a formal ensemble called out for special events, had a successful year. Besides performing at all choir concerts, they appeared at Christmas parties and performed at the last boys' basketball game. Two members — Mark Richards and Phillip Werman — went to All-State Choir.

Lending hearts

"Having Ms. Mottley as a teacher has helped me to have the confidence to live my life to the fullest."

• Crystal Shaffer

Considerate, giving, openhearted. All of these words describe the JOGS class of 2001. Project after project, they worked their fingers to the bone to make an enjoyable year for others. The year was spent putting together holidays for the less fortunate. For Christmas they spent the day with the children from Happy Hearts spreading joy and the spirit of Christmas.

Donations came in by the bagful when it came time to give HomeSafe some supplies. Valentine's Day found them carrying out their kindness at Carrington Park when several students brought carnations and handmade cards to the patients.

JOGS students kept busy throughout the 2000 -2001 school year. Their efforts did not go unappreciated. The many people that these acts of kindness affected were very grateful for their time spent. JOGS students just couldn't stop giving--and they didn't.

Studying Abroad

Learning a new language can be a daunting task. Jessica Ropos works in Frau Kaura's German I class.

"I'm glad I took German as my foreign language. It helped expand my knowledge of the German language as well as its culture."

Kris Skully

Hola! Bonjour! Guten tag! These words started the classes of many students everyday. The French, German, and Spanish Clubs learned another language—and picked up a little bit of culture too.

The French Club took a few field trips, going to Cleveland to see Les Miserables and the Cleveland Museum of Art. They held a week-long initiation for new members. All classes had parties for French holidays. For Mardi Gras, they had a decorating contest, won by French III and IV.

German students were taught via the ITV class, so Harbor students learned alongside those from Ashtabula and Conneaut. They had parties making German foods, such as bratwurst and potato pancakes.

Spanish Club had an exciting year. They travelled to Cleveland to see Folklorio, a ballet. They also went to Cedar Point. The club held four fiestas a year and also adopted Hispanic families for Christmas.

• Jeannie Jyurovat

Cooperation is the key to any successful project. Freshmen Jenny Hemminger, Sara Fusco, Stephany Millick, and Elizabeth Volpone work on perfecting their wall for Mardi Gras.

After carefully pouring a drink for herself, Kami Klingler intends to take a little "siesta" on Cinco de Mayo.

German class isn't always fun and games. Terry Schlaich and David Wischhusen diligently complete their classwork.

Tradewind Talent

"Woodshop rules!"

• Bill Simmons

"If it's not on 8-track, it's not music."

• Mr. McCunn

Creative juices flowed in the "B" Building. The Industrial Arts Club and the Art Club, advised by Mr. Ty McCunn and Mrs. K. Ann Rapose respectively, left evidence of their inspirations all over Harbor.

The Industrial Arts Club knew how to have a great time. They participated in the Business Club Volleyball tournament, taking second place. The club also made their mark on film, taping a series of recruiting videos for junior high students and filming openings for Harbor Happenings. They even held a barbecue in the winter.

Not only did these people have fun, but they created beautiful art—some pieces were under construction all year.

The Art Club was a similar whirlwind of talent and activity. The club boosted school spirit during football season by making and selling spirit tags worn by many students and teachers. In April, they took their yearly trip to the Cleveland Museum of Art. Members also created works of art which were displayed in the front hall showcase at Harbor and also in the display at the Lake Avenue First Merit Bank.

"I felt Harbor Happenings was a really good activity to help break away from my shyness and let people know who I am."

Because this was the last yearbook ever, the Mariner staff aimed for outstanding results. Time and dedication were a big factor in making the book. "I've never spent so much time after school until I started working on the yearbook, especially Fridays," remarked Ryan Watts.

The staff kept busy writing copies and captions, taking memorable pictures and getting ads from local businesses.

Along with making the yearbook, this class included the production of Harbor Happenings. Improvements from last year and other fresh ideas were brought to the morning show.

From End to Beginning

June 3, 2001 - a day that would mark the end of one era, but the start of another

After shaking off the initial shock of consolidation, Harbor settled back down to a level of normalcy. Seasons came and went, just like any other year. Autumn changed to winter with each leaf's descent; winter bloomed into spring as nature underwent her annual renewal.

As each day passed, the finality of Harbor's reign came closer and closer. Some students wondered if they'd ever stop hearing about "the final this" and "the last that." Nearing year's end, though, many realized that this was it—the last chapter in Harbor's history was being written with every passing second.

And then it was over. As inevitable as the seasons, June fifth approached, and Harbor's existence officially ended.

With Harbor's closing, the era of Lakeside began. A whole new history was waiting to be written.

But Harbor would never be forgotten.

A Letter From the Editor

There were days when I wanted to seriously injure myself or others. There were afternoons when I laughed until I tears came, either out of joy or despair. There were nights when I questioned my own sanity by staying at Harbor until 8 p.m.

Then there were days when deadlines loomed overwhelmingly, and I neglected work in all other classes just to finalize spreads and hit the seemingly impossible 40-page requirements. There were afternoons in June when, instead of enjoying my summer vacation, I went to Room 24 to work. Finally, there were nights when I wondered if all this work was done in vain—if the students would really appreciate this book come October.

And 300 hours later, the book was finished.

What yearbook has done for me I will never be able to express. It has brought me the best and worst times in my life. More importantly, I have matured a great deal as a person because of it.

Perhaps most importantly though, yearbook has given me a sense of closure concerning consolidation. Compiling all these memories made Harbor's demise a little easier for me to take. In one sense, Farewell Tour became a personal quest for me to cram all the memories, nostalgia and history that I could fit inside 160 pages. I wanted the world to know about Harbor before she died, and with the publication of the book you hold now, I believe I may have succeeded.

But what would I be without my invaluable staff?

- Megan—With all the innuendo and "tension," it's a wonder there weren't 8 Waikēia's crawling around Room 24 by the time we finished! Thank you for keeping me grounded.

- Christina—You always knew exactly what I needed when I was stressing out over the fifty

A Letter From the Advisors

Yearbook class is quite possibly the most underrated, exciting, miserable and delightful class in any school. Harbor's last yearbook class was no exception. We typically waited until the last minute to meet deadlines, made the same mistakes over and over again and promised each other we would faithfully (fill in the blank) or never again (fill in the blank)—then broke those promises again and again. We fought, made up, delighted in each other's successes, commiserated over each other's failures, and consumed enormous amounts of pizza.

We were a family with two "moms." Mrs. Planisek was the grounded mom, watching over family finances—book sales, advertising and bill payment. She frequently provided advice and encouragement to the staff and checked on Mrs. Moroski's mental state. Mrs. Moroski was the mom who stayed home with the kids—teaching desktop publishing and journalism, browbeating columns out of mulish reporters, rampaging when things went badly, celebrating when things went well.

Both moms were blessed with bright and creative "youngsters" who were willing to take risks and give 100% when the going got tough.

million things I had to do. Don't forget our talk in the reference room—become a journalist now that you've seen how fun it is.

- Ryan—You surprised me—I had no idea that you'd be one of the most reliable, competent staffers I'd have. Take that as a compliment.

- Jen—What really impresses me is how far you came over the course of a year. The improvement in the quality of your work from September to May was amazing. I'm proud of you.

- Jeannie—You came in halfway through and took the class by storm, accomplishing a great amount of work in a short amount of time. You're a true friend.

- Karina—Just like Jen, you've gotten a million times better since September. I'm glad I got to know you better through yearbook. I mean, not every guy gets to work with the hottest girl in the school.

- Phillip—Phillip! The ace of my staff! You kept us laughing all year long. We have so many inside jokes I can't even begin to list them here. Thanks for everything.

- Becky—Even though I could never find stuff for you to do, when I did find it, you would always come through and be willing to work. Thanks for all you've done, in class and out of class—and, yeah, that's a metaphor.

- Sara—Despite only working half a year, you laid the groundwork that helped us complete the rest of the book. It was invaluable.

- Mike—My memories of you (which are many) don't really concern this class; it's more like Model UN, Academic Team, Ender's Game, much more important stuff than yearbook. Keep in touch after you become a media personality.

That's all. I know this book is far from perfect, but I apologize ahead of time for any mistakes, misspelled names, etc. And with that said, the last ship truly has come to port.

- Justin Nigro, editor of the Mariner

To all of you, especially Justin—our head risk-taker and glutton for hard work—thank you. You made this last year of Harbor High's annual an exciting and extremely satisfying one. For the school, this book is a wonderful collection of most of the memories that matter. For your advisors, it is a touching reminder of a remarkable staff.

Colophon

"Farewell Tour," the 2001 final Mariner yearbook, was printed by Herff/Jones Yearbooks in Gettysburg, PA. Press run was 305 copies for Volume 89. Mark Potteiger served as sales representative, and Debbie Drobenak served as company representative.

The theme was changed several times throughout the year, but finally settled upon its present state due to Dr. William Licata's decision to consolidate.

The cover was printed in full color Permacote on a Vista Litho cover with gloss lamination. The text paper is 80 bound Bordeaux. All color pages were featured in two flats of full color.

The body text font is Galliard, captions are Franklin Gothic Condensed with Forte as the drop cap, and folios are in Hobbit with Busorama Md BT as page numbers. Headline fonts include Reindeer SF, Eras Contour, Hobbit, and ITC Officina Sans Book.

Yearbooks were sold for $40 until December, $45 until April, and $50 until the end of the school year. The staff sold approximately $5,000 in advertising, which financed the publication along with book sales.

Special thanks to: Eleanor Andrews, for providing the staff with Harbor history; the Harbor-Topky Memorial Library, for use of historic Harbor photos; Barbican Studios, for film and photos at various events; the custodial staff, for cleaning around us after school; and all the advertisers in our book, for donating to our book despite being tapped out from all sorts of Lakeside fundraisers.
